

1. Edit Locally is for those who:

- Have synced the builder project to pavlovia, and
- Want to edit the psychoJS-based experiments directly, in turns disregarding back-compatibility with builder and python, and
- Want to edit the psychoJS-based experiments on your local disk instead of through the pavlovia & gitlab interface

(advantage: easier edits, prettier interface)

2. Run Locally is for those who:

- Want to run the psychoJS-based experiments on your local disk

(useful for debugging & moving psychoJS-based experiments to (lab) computers without internet access)

3. Run local scripts with pavlovia is for those who:

- Want to create your own website from scratch and
- Want to use pavlovia as the server

(useful for partial integration with psychoJS libraries)

None of this intends to/ will:

- Bypass the pavlovia server to run online studies